Push Laundry is the brainchild of software engineer and mobile app developer, Brian Gorham. From the time he developed his first app at age 10, Gorham has been inspired to simplify and automate mundane tasks using modern technology. As a freshman at Ohio State University, Brian launched several successful mobile apps in various industries. He noticed a technology gap in the laundry industry- few laundry services or laundromats had an online presence, and none had a mobile app.

Immediately, Gorham realized the need to make laundry services more accessible to consumers. He sought more experience and quickly became an expert in the field by partnering with a local laundromat in between classes. Brian designed and developed the technology with the goal of making laundry easier than ordering a pizza online. The app and website he developed became Push Laundry, eventually transforming the laundry industry and reaching clients from the Ohio State campus to 40+ cities nationwide.
